

RECOMMENDED READINGS AND RESOURCES

- The following two pdf documents are critical sources of information that provide information relevant to California community colleges. Both are good references related to topics discussed throughout the Institute:
  - ACCJC “Accrediting Commission for Community and Junior Colleges.” The link to ACCJC.org is <https://accjc.org/>
  - College Finance – Past/Present/Future (March 2016) by Teresa M. Scott. Although a little dated and only up to the SB 361 funding model, which was replaced in 2018 by the SCFF (Student Centered Funding Formula) this fabulous document includes a historical summary related to how community college districts are funded, the FON (Full-Time Faculty Obligation Number), and a Glossary of Financial Terms.
- Listed below are two links to the California Community Colleges Budget & Accounting Manual, fondly referred to as simply “The BAM.”
  - The first link is to the CCCCO’s website page concerning the BAM. We do not expect you to study the entire document, but we do expect you to review the table of contents from the web page and to read Chapter 1, Introduction. Here is the link to the BAM web page:

  - Another link to the CCCCO’s website is the Budget News section of the website. This site provides summary information related to California Community College budget information and also provides links to several organizations that play important roles in the development and implementation of the budget. Here is the link to the Budget News web page:
